The Hands of Rodin: A Tribute to B. Gerald Cantor Milton Esterow

[Please note: Although some of the hand sculpture in the exhibition is discussed in this booklet, this should be considered a tribute rather than a complete exhibition catalogue.] The exhibition travelled to LA, Phila., Portland & other cities. Dedicated to the memory of B. Gerald Cantor (1916-1996), The Hands of Rodin exhibition explored Rodin's fascination with the diverse forms of hands and their expressive capabilities, both as independent sculptures and as components to a larger whole. The exhibition featured a selection of about fifty sculptures demonstrating Rodin's mastery of portraying the lines of the human hand while communicating their strength, movement and expression. The very first Rodin Mr. Cantor purchased was The Hand of God, a highly symbolic work that uses the hand to represent the creator of man and woman. 16-page stapled booklet; b/w illus.
