Liverworts of New England is volume 99 of the Memoirs of The New York Botanical Garden series. This is a book for those who are just beginning to look at these fascinating plants as well as for those who didn't even know these plants existed. The complexity, diversity, and beauty of liverworts make them absorbing objects of study and research. In explanations that do not intimidate or oversimplify, the author describes the nearly 200 species in 62 genera found in diverse habitats throughout the six New England states. Features that can be seen with a hand lens are emphasized; so that curious naturalists will not need a compound microscope. Color photographs, line drawings, distribution maps, and simple keys assist in the identification of common species, and a helpful glossary of terms is also included. Liverworts of New England is a great companion to The Macrolichens of New England (J. W. Hinds and P. L. Hinds, 2008; Memoirs vol. 96). Together these field guides to the New England region introduce novices to the art of finding and identifying liverworts and lichens visible to the naked eye. An avid amateur bryologist, Mary S.G. Lincoln has taught bryology courses for the New England Wildflower Society for several years. She is Founder and President of High Pond Farm, an educational outdoor preserve in New Hampshire offering weekend workshops for amateur naturalists in botany, lichenology, bryology, geology, odonatology, herpetology, entomology, ornithology, and ecology.
